Emily Rachel Silverstein lived a life of compassion for her community and passion for a better world. Although her life was violently cut short at 19, Emily earned a reputation as a well-respected campus leader and organizer for community service and social change. The EMILY Fund was established to continue Emily's legacy of hope in action for a better world, and her strong conviction that every act of compassion makes a difference. The EMILY Fund programs include:

* Do One Thing: provides free reproducible resources around a calendar addressing more than 60 social issues, to inspire and empower young people to make a difference in their communities;

* Stop Dating Violence: provides free educational materials, including distributing more than 375,000 Dating Pledge Cards to a network of more than 600 schools and domestic violence agencies in all 50 states, and inspiring over 400 Governor and Mayor proclamations in 47 states, providing opportunities for local awareness-raising activities across the nation;

* Annual Student Scholarships: to encourage and reward student volunteer service.
